Mrs. W. D. Ramsay, Marion, Raymond and Ruth, motored to Edmonton on Saturday. They visited Claude and Anne (Mrs. W. Ramsay) who is also a patient in the University hospital.

Be careful, little folks, where you wade. Little Joan Prior was having a delightful time last Saturday until she stepped on some broken glass and cut her foot. This necessitated a trip to the doctor and four stitches.

However she was out to Sunday School next day, all smiles, but a trifle paler than usual.

Protect Cattle Against Blackleg

Before turning cattle out on pasture all young stock should be vaccinated. A combined Blackleg-Malignant Edema bacteria is the best to use as both these diseases can cause trouble. Calves should be vaccinated at 3 to 5 months of age and again at 6 to 8 months to get maximum protection. This is not a disease where you can wait and see, usually the first symptoms are dead animals.

Poisonous Weeds

There are a few weeds in this district which are poisonous to livestock. As most trouble occurs in the spring, you should know these weeds in order to be able to protect your livestock. There is a bulletin available at my office called "Weeds Poisonous to Livestock." Pick up a copy and find out what Tall Larkspur, Low Larkspur, Death Camas and Water Hemlock look like so that you will recognize them when you see them.

Why Not Use Sweet Clover

Sweet Clover makes good hay when cut at the proper time, it can also be used for pasture. It also is a quick way to get a lot of Nitrogen and some fibre into the soil in a hurry. Sweet Clover seeded with the last grain crop before summerfallowing will give you an early cut of feed and still time for a job of summerfallowing. Using this procedure you can reduce the cost of a summerfallow year, provide a good quantity of feed for cattle and improve the soil all at one time. With the present squeeze on farm incomes this is a practice which should be looked into by many farmers.

Singer Russell Jenkins At Irma and Viking April 27th

On Friday evening, Russell Jenkins, noted Welsh tenor, who spurned a tempting operatic offer, will be giving his life story and a sacred concert in the Irma Alliance Church at 8 o'clock. He will also participate in the Sunday services at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. in the Irma Church and at 9 p.m. in the Anglican Hall in Viking.

Mr. Jenkins is a graduate of the National College of Music, Wales and has an unusually fine voice. Franklin Kelsey, one of Europe's leading voice trainers states, "His voice is a robust tenor of Wagnerian calibre and of outstanding quality," while Sidlow Baxter, well-known hymnwriter and evangelist says "I feel proud to think he is singing my hymns across the world."

In addition to the mentioned songs, Mr. Jenkins will also be singing at the Youth For Christ rally on Saturday evening at 8 p.m. in the Servicemen's Centre. Rev. Laughton of the Nazarene Church, Edmonton, will be guest speaker, and a visiting instrumental trio will also participate.

The public is urged to attend these services as we expect this will be the last time that Mr. Jenkins will be able to be with us. He is leaving shortly to engage in an evangelistic tour in other parts of Canada, United States and the British Isles.

O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms.

For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods. In His hand are the deep places of the earth; the strength of the hills is His also.

The sea is His, and He made it: and His hands formed the dry land.

O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our maker.

For He is our God; and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand. Today if ye will hear His voice, Harden not your heart. —Psalm 96:1-8A.

Falsework on Highway 36 bridge demolished, 20 men escape death

Twenty men narrowly escaped serious injury and possible death in a mishap on the new Highway 36 bridge north of Taber which may hold up completion of the bridge for a month.

The photo above shows the upstream side of the bridge where river ice, lifting under the pressure from the rising water, toppled the falsework for the two centre spans. The crew were working in the spaces where fallen timbers can be seen (eight of them within six feet of the water) at 8:45 Monday morning when the structures gave way.

Two men were pinned by falling steel and wood; one of them, Jim Friesen of Taber, was still in hospital with possible chest injuries at last report.

A third man was thrown into the Oldman River, only about six feet deep at that point but flowing rapidly and barely above freezing temperature. He was swept downstream but worked his way close enough to shore that a rope could be thrown to him.

The temporary causeway and bridge downstream from the bridge were washed out and a sizeable quantity of building material carried off down river.

Only a minute and a half elapsed from the time the pilings gave way until the last man had scrambled.

STORAGE FOR JELLY JARS

An ordinary shoe box is an ideal place to store jelly jars. Fill each shoe box with the filled jelly glasses and label the lid of each box. This saves the trouble of labeling each individual glass and makes a dust and dirt-proof storage place for your jelly. Where space is crowded these boxes may be placed one on top of the other.

There are 254 religious bodies in the United States.

bled or been pulled to safety.

Construction workers say that work on the two centre spans cannot be resumed until the ice goes out of the river and the water recedes so that a pile driver can be taken into the stream bed to place supports for new falsework to carry forms for the arches. This may take a month.

The 900-foot bridge is the major construction project on the new Highway 36 link between Taber and Vauxhall—The Times, Taber, Alta.

JUST TWO DAYS!

There are two days in every week about which we should not worry—two days which should be kept from fear and apprehension.

One of these days is yesterday with its mistakes and cares, its faults and blunders. All the money in the world cannot bring back yesterday.

The other day we should not worry about is tomorrow with its possible adversities, its burdens, its large promise and poor performance. Tomorrow also is beyond our immediate control. Tomorrow's sun will rise in splendour or behind a mask of clouds—but it will rise. Until it does, we have no stake in tomorrow, for it is as yet unborn.

That leaves only one day—today. Any man can fight the battles of just one day. It is only when you and I add the burdens of those two awful eternities—but it will rise. Until it does, we have no stake in tomorrow, for it is as yet unborn.

It is not the experience of today that drives man mad—it is the regret of yesterday and the dread of tomorrow may bring. Let us, therefore, journey but one day at a time. The Times, Delburne, Alberta.

Potato payments suspended

The Honourable Douglas S. Harkness, Minister of Agriculture, announced today that the Agricultural Stabilization Board has suspended the diversion support program on Canada No. 1 potatoes to starch factories, effective April 14, 1958. In line with this decision inspection at starch plants will not be available after that date.

Suspension of potato payments seems advisable at present, since prices have advanced considerably in the past two months and the market has remained firm. Under existing conditions it is unwise to pay for potatoes to starch factories on account of price levels.

PRACTICE ROAD COURTESY

Chicken sexing exacting but well-paid occupation

By JACK VASSOR

There are many unusual jobs in the world but one of the most unusual tasks performed in Melville is that of Harry Tabata, young Vancouver Japanese, who specializes in "chicken sexing".

An annual visitor to Melville hatcheries for the past four years, Harry is one of that small group of highly trained individuals who each spring in Canada are called on to separate male and female chicks during the hatchery season.

It is an exacting job that calls for both speed and accuracy, requiring that the sexer handle from 900 to 1,000 birds an hour if he is to make any money.

And make money, they do. When it is considered they get paid by the chick and that they handle from 6,000 to 10,000 a day, the amount they make in the two-and-a-half month season can readily be appreciated. But the pay must be good, for the season is so short.

To the average person, the sexing of a chick may be somewhat of a mystery, but to Harry there is little mystery involved. With movements that rival machine-like automation, it takes him only a matter of seconds to make his inspection with the aid of a special optical instrument, and toss the bird lightly into its proper bin. That is all there is to it.

Some species of chicks, such as Barred Rocks and New Hampshire, he can separate simply by looking at the coloring of their heads and tiny wings. The only type he does not like to do at all is the White Rock variety, which he says are extremely delicate and easily killed.

Due to their delicate hands, the Japanese apparently are excellent at this type of work. This, at least, would appear to be the case when it is considered there are only in the vicinity of 25 men in Canada who specialize at it, and most of them are Japanese.

Harry is actually a fisherman by trade and owns his own 35-foot boat at the West Coast. But in 1952 he took a two-week course under a friend who opened up a sexing school and now fills in his off seasons by rendering this valuable service to hatcheries in this area.

With a total of 10 sexers working hatcheries in Vancouver and other parts of B.C., Harry has had to move east as far as Winnipeg each spring, working out of that city for the past six years and sharing the field with five others.

Increasing his speed from 200 chicks an hour in his first year, Harry is now capable of inspecting close to 1,000 in the same period of time. Prior to this season he managed to work hatcheries in other centres as well as Melville, averaging up to 10,000 birds a day. But 1958, he finds, is not too good a year. He now totals a "mere" 6,000 birds daily, because he is working only the two Melville hatcheries.

Harry arrived here March 8 and by the end of May will have gone again, his work in the hatcheries over for another season. Once at the coast, he will board his boat and join the fleets of fishermen that ply the coastal waters in search of tuna, salmon, crab and shrimp.

For Harry Tabata, it is an interesting life and what counts the most—a profitable one too.

And all because of a parking ticket

You know, there is something so friendly about a small town or village, while in a larger city because of its size, must of necessity have regulations which would make it seem less amiable. Take, for example, the parking of vehicles. In Binscarth one can practically park where one wants for any length of time with hardly an eyebrow raised, and even the by-law about over-sized trucks has all but been forgotten. In the town of Russell, because of the larger number of vehicles, certain restrictions have to be enforced, with specified areas reserved for the parking of trucks, and they also have a town policeman to see that these regulations are observed, and that offenders are dealt with in accordance with the law.

It seems that some young ladies were in Binscarth a short while ago and chose to go to Russell to check up on the bargains, as women are wont to do. There didn't appear to be any available parking space for the car on the main street, but they noticed a lesser street which had room—plus a sign which read "Trucks only". Whether or not they thought the sign sounded like a truck and should therefore qualify is not known, but they did park in the available space and merrily went about their shopping.

On the journey home, the ladies were nearly to Binscarth when one of them noticed a slip of paper fluttering from the windshield wiper, and they came to a stop to investigate. Oh, cruel fate! A note from the Town of Russell inviting them to call at the town office and pay a fine for a traffic violation (illegal parking), with the alternative of a court summons if the fine were not paid.

So, around with the car and back to Russell to enrich the town coffers. On arriving at the office it was discovered with great dismay that the Town Clerk had looked up the place and gone home and, although they contacted him at his residence, he was not anxious to go back and open the office. With the threat of the summons looming large for the minute, the ladies then endeavoured to pan their money off on the RCMP but, since this had not reached the proportions of a Federal matter, the RCMP were sympathetic but unable to help. All was nearly given up for loss when the town constable was sighted, and he proved quite agreeable to taking their money. (After all, didn't he issue the ticket?) He wrote out what might be termed a temporary receipt and advised that the Town Clerk would mail the official receipt. "Heavens, no," screamed the harassed driver, "don't do that. My husband might get hold of it."

Now it could be that the effected parties do not read The Express and News, but I'll bet that every husband feeds pretty good for a while because no wife will want her husband to think that she is skimping on meals because she spent part of the grocery money on a parking ticket.—The Express Binscarth, Man.

Sift ¼ teaspoon baking soda into lukewarm sour cream mixture.

3. Turn out on floured board and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Grease top. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 3 hours.

4. Punch down dough. Turn out on lightly-floured board and knead well. Divide dough into equal portions, shape each portion into a 12-inch roll and cut into 12 equal pieces.

5. Grease each piece of dough into a roll about 3 inches long. Arrange, about an inch apart, on greased, buttered sheet. Grease top. Cover. Let rise until doubled in bulk—about 1½ hours. Bake in hot oven, 400° about 14 minutes. Yield—3 dozen finger rolls.

News Report From Edmonton

By Ken Mason

EDMONTON—With several of the more vociferous Opposition members not bothering to come back after a weekend layoff, it didn't take the Legislature long to complete its unfinished business on Monday of last week.

Lieutenant-Governor Dr. J. J. Bowen entered the House at 4:17 p.m. and gave royal assent to 98 bills, raising to 103 the total number passed during the session.

Seconds later the session officially ended as members of the press gallery showered MLA's and cabinet ministers with bushels of torn up notes, bills and papers accumulated during more than seven weeks of legislative sound and fury.

The final day was spent mostly on gathering up loose ends of the new liquor legislation, which will give Alberta cocktail lounges, licensed dining rooms, legal drinking in supper clubs and liquor on trains.

It marks the first major change in the province's liquor laws since prohibition was repealed in 1924.

The liquor bills went through with little debate on the principle involved, although they accounted for more talking than any other issue of the session. The talk developed over the administrative and penalty sections, which were picked to pieces by lawyers sitting on the Opposition side.

In fact, it was lengthy bickering over technical aspects of the bills which prevented prorogation a week earlier and brought members back for one day last week.

Opposition forces had both success and failure in their efforts to change sections of the act.

The government refused to remove a section which says decisions, orders and rulings of the liquor board can't be appealed. This was one of the things that kept debate going for about an hour on the final day.

When the voluminous liquor bills were finally through the House, Hon. F. C. Colborne, who had had the stiffest task of the session in piloting them, thanked all members for their help. "I am particularly pleased with the manner in which it received general acceptance on all sides," he said.

He was referring to the fact that some members are personally opposed to any relaxation in liquor laws, but in view of last year's plebiscite they felt there was no choice.

The House was in session for 34 days, during which members were called back for 11 night sitting and 2 morning-sittings. Generally, they agreed it was one of the roughest in years.

It ended with the government committed to several projects for the coming year.

The government and the oil and gas conservation board will study ways of coping with increased consumer prices for gas brought about by rising domestic and export demands.

There will be a departmental study of legislation governing Alberta's Huttenite colonies, which are now spreading from northern to southern Alberta. Premier Manning told the House he is not satisfied with the present laws, which require colonies to be 40 miles apart. There has been a suggestion that the Communal Properties Act would not stand up in court, since it is legislation against a minority group.

There also will be a study of irrigation in the coming year.

A highlight of the session was the budget, which called for reduced spending for the first time since 1946, and which introduced a new departure in the Social Credit government's fiscal policy.

The budget called for expenditures of $263,664,093, a drop of more than $21,805,000 from last year's record figure.

The decline doesn't affect departmental spending, which in fact will increase. But loans to municipalities and Alberta Government Telephones—previously regarded as expenditures although they created reserves—will be virtually eliminated.

On the other hand, direct grants to municipalities will be up by nearly $14,000,000. Expenditures on education, health and welfare show sizeable boosts, and another major highway program is proposed.

The reduced budget was introduced in the face of expected de-

With spring well on its way a number of families will plan to build new homes or remodel old ones. We have three bulletins which may be of assistance to you. These are "Farm House Planning," "Farm Kitchens and Utility Rooms," and "Farm House Remodeling." We would like to give you these publications, however, they are relatively expensive to publish, so as a result they are loaned out and then returned to our office. Accompanying the Farm House Planning bulletin are working drawings for the plan you choose. These include complete plans, elevations, sections and details necessary for house construction, as well as a list of the building materials needed. Blueprints are $2.50.

If your houseplan is completed, perhaps you would be interested to have the Home Designing Specialist look it over before you plan to continue. You may send your plan to my office in Vegreville which I will forward to the Home Designing Specialist or you may mail it direct to:

Track and Field Competitions at Camrose

The Camrose Recreation Commission are organizing and running the 1938 Alberta Provincial Track and Field Championships in Camrose on Saturday, June 14th.

In order that all areas of the province can correlate their programs with this, we would be grateful for any announcements on this event.

clines in revenue from oil and gas, resulting from loss of U.S. markets and a drop in production.

Opposition ranks tried repeatedly to kill the oil and gas dividend program, pointing to the large number of persons jailed for obtaining them illegally last year.

The favorite charge was that the Social Crediters were afraid to "lose face" by admitting the whole thing was a mistake. The budget set aside $10,000,000 for the dividends this year, against $11,000,000 last year. Individual payments will be slightly smaller, and a new system of distribution is being introduced to cut down on abuses. From now on, applications will be checked before the money is paid out instead of after.

Most of the Opposition resolutions introduced on private members' days were crushed by the Social majority, but one Social Credit backbencher motion drew unanimous support.

It called for establishment of an advisory service to help co-operatives and other groups interested in rural gas distribution. Presumably, such a service will be set up before too long, but province-wide gas distribution in rural areas is still a long way off.

Two bulky reports from Royal Commissions gave members plenty of spare-time reading but there was little or no debate.

The MacGregor Royal Commission on northern development urged the province to press for an immediate start on a railway north through McMurray to the Northwest Territories, and called for a major program of northern road improvement.

The Blackstock Royal Commission on teachers' salaries urged a province-wide uniform salary schedule for schoolteachers, and withdrawal of their right to strike. So far the government hasn't promised any action on this one. The idea is strongly opposed by the Alberta Teachers' Association.

The March 31 federal election didn't go unnoticed in the Legislature. Members forgot political differences and offered desk-thumping congratulations to the victorious Progressive Conservative party.

The election results make for interesting speculation on what might happen in the next provincial vote, but space restrictions make it necessary to set that over for a future report.

Edmonton Circuit Luther Leaguers Hold Successful 3 Day Convention in Viking

The Luther League Convention held at Golden Valley Lutheran Church, April 18th to 20th, was an important event in the life of the youths. The registration was 100, mostly teenagers from Edmonton, Tofield, Ryley, Golden, St. George, Irma, Daysland and Chauvin. Gordon Hagen was re-elected president of the Edmonton Circuit Luther League at this convention.

On Friday evening the Convention got off to fine start with a Social Hour as a means of getting acquainted with one another. Pastor Carl Johnson spoke at the Vesper Service and introducing the theme of the Convention, "Christ's Increasing Church." He pointed out that Christians are a people called out and called together by the Holy Spirit for a purpose and that we have been called together to consider our place in Christ's Increasing Church.

Saturday was a day packed with events: Bible Study, discussions, recreation, skits, music and much singing. We all enjoyed, very much, the organ and piano duets by Doris Anderson and Samuel Shen. The P.T.M. Banquet on Saturday was attended by practically all who had registered. The highlight of the banquet was the challenging address by Mr. Peter Tan from China, now studying at the University of Saskatchewan. He gave a testimony of his own experience of becoming a Christian some years ago in China, and told about the conditions in Hong Kong with the many refugees there. He challenged the young people to go forward with Christ in service in His Increasing Church. Saturday evening, after a full program, closed with most of the people in the church going to the altar and spending a few moments in silent prayer. It was an impressive ending of the day.

Sunday began with Altar Prayer at 9 a.m. At the morning worship, Peter Tan again spoke, stressing the need of missions; he pointed out that for any one who is a Christian, there is no choice, we must obey the Master's command which includes the preaching of repentance leading to the forgiveness of sin which should be preached among all heathen. He himself was a result of Foreign Missions. It was a very heart-searching address. The church was filled to capacity for both the morning and afternoon sessions. At the morning service the Choral Union Choir sang three numbers under the direction of Stan Halse. Pastor Carl Johnson was the speaker both Sunday afternoon and evening. Pastor C. Lund, President of Edmonton Lutheran College, spoke on behalf of Christian Education.

On Sunday evening a very original sound and picture story was presented by the Leaguers from Mt. Zion, Edmonton. The pictures for the slides were photographed in Edmonton, the Leaguers making up the cast and sound supplied by a tape recording. It was a modern version of Jesus opening the eyes of a blind man. Strangely enough, when the miracle did take place, nobody would believe that the boy actually could see; they believed he was crazy, demon possessed, or had hallucinations. Truly, we live in a sceptical age, and a time of great perversion of ideas.

We believe the Convention was important for all of us. It was an inspiration to be among so many young people, and there are many fine young people in our circuit. We were all challenged to self-examination, and to go forward in Christ's Increasing Church. —J. Precht.

A number of members of the Golden Valley Lutheran Church made a surprise visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sigurd Lefsrud on Monday evening to bid them farewell and good wishes before they leave on their trip to Norway, England, and other European countries. Pastor J. Precht presented them with a parting gift on behalf of those present. Mr. and Mrs. Lefsrud leave on Thursday by train to New York where they sail on the Queen Elizabeth liner to England. They expect to be away until some time in September.

Saturday night was hockey night in Viking when the Viking Gas Kings, executive members and stick boys were presented with jackets by the Carina board. The team finished the schedule with a place in the playoffs when they eliminated the Camrose Maroons for the 4th spot. In the playoffs the team even had a shutout against the Hardisty Stampeders, final league winners.

Only a few Northwestern Utilities Ltd. employees remained to "hold the fort" in the Viking, Kinross and Irma offices on Friday, April 11. The rest of them, along with other employees from all over northern Alberta, were guests of the company at the annual banquet and dance held in the MacDonald Hotel in Edmonton.

A NEW FARM SERVICE

The Canadian Veterinary Medical Association is issuing a new release service that will appear from time to time in this paper.

Criticism and suggestions along these lines are always welcome and any farmers should address their letters to the Canadian Veterinary Medical Association, P.O. Box 416, Ottawa 2, Ontario.

Urges Use of Metal Magnets For Hardware Disease Cases

Hardware disease has always been a problem in cattle. The Canadian Veterinary Medical Association says it has been increasing in recent years. The disease is the result of cattle swallowing nails or bits of baling wire or other metal around the barn, the feed lot, or while grazing. However, veterinarians have been helping prevent complications from this cause by having cattle swallow a magnet, which remains in the paunch where it attracts and holds the metal objects and usually prevents them from doing damage.

Hardware disease may result in a loss of milk production, and can even cause the death of an animal if the metal object passes through the stomach wall into the heart or some other vital organ. When an owner thinks that a valuable animal may possibly have hardware disease, the veterinarian can tell whether metal is present in the stomach by use of a "detector," similar in principle to a wartime mine detector. If treated in time the animal usually can be saved by an operation.

Such loss of weight occurs when the metal is in the stomach. The modern cattlemen are still concerned and careful to minimize the loss.

More nervous tension under the crowded and uncomfortable shipping conditions has a tendency to pull weight off the cattle. Depending on the distance to market, this weight may not be entirely "all" but also actual tissue live-weight. For the most part, however, it is the retention of the contents of the digestive tract, and in recognition of that fact a buyer weighing sheep right after a feed lot customarily, by agreement, discounts the scale weight perhaps 4 per cent.

When the steers are to be weighed at the stock yards or packing plant, the shrink carcots can be held down if you follow these pre-shipment management practices: On the evening before shipment and on the morning before loading, reduce both corn and silage. If any is fed, to one-half the customary level. Allow free access to the hay that has been fed all along, and to water all night long, so that the cattle feel reasonably full and comfortable. However, you should shut the steers away from water first thing in the morning so they won't be in a sloshing condition during transport.

The modern cattlemen's principle here is the same as that of the oldtimers—comfortable cattle suffer less weight loss than those whose comfort has not been considered.

Questions: How much salt do horses need?

Answer: Studies at Michigan, Mississippi and other stations show that horses and mules differ greatly in their individual consumption of salt, and they consume different amounts at different seasons, also according to their activity. In one study the salt intake of 15 horses ranged from a high of 2.25 ounces per day to a low of about 1/4 ounce per day. Because of the wide variation it is inadvisable for horses and mules to have constant access to loose salt. Use of iodized or mineralized salt for horses is becoming increasingly popular.

Preparing Steers For Shipment To Market

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt, Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry, University of Wisconsin

Old-time cattlemen were very much concerned about "drift" or loss of weight in cattle being driven long distances to market. They would make sure of plenty of grass and water enroute, provide salt and permit the animals sufficient slope for chewing their cud. In other words they would, as much as possible, provide the comforts of home to keep the steers in good condition in order to hold the weight losses low.

Such loss of weight occurs when the metal is in the stomach. The modern cattlemen are still concerned and careful to minimize the loss.

Fire Prevention Poster Contest popular

Winners of the annual fire prevention poster competition, sponsored by the Saskatchewan Fire Commissioner's office, were announced recently by Hon. C. C. Williams, minister in charge of the Fire Prevention Act.

Because of the number and quality of posters received, it was decided this year to sponsor two separate competitions in which the city school entries would be separated from the other entries received. "As the purpose of the competition is to stimulate interest and thought on the subject of fire prevention by the students, the message of fire prevention, originality and art were the criteria used by judges in picking winners," Mr. Williams said.

Winners of the Grade 1 to 6 group in the country division were: Ann Rodowski, Grade 5, Hafford, Sask., 2nd—Rusty Earl, Grade 6, Coleville School, Coleville; 3rd—Barbara Ackerman, Grade 5, Lake Lenore.

Winners of the Grade 7 to 12 group in the country division were: 1st—Arthur Kempen, Grade 7, Wroxton; 2nd—Norman Metchuk, Grade 10, Wroxton; 3rd—Frank Murias, Grade 8, Porcupine Plain, Sask.

Judges for the competition were Fire Commissioner Ross Switzer; Dominion Fire Commissioner C. A. Thomson; and J. F. Hudson, production manager of Central Press, Regina.

Commenting on the competition

Food handling classes a success

The staff of the Rosetown Health Region conducted Food Handlers' Schools in six towns within the Region. A total of 145 students attended, consisting of cooks, waiters, waitresses, hospital kitchen staffs and ladies belonging to charitable catering organizations. The course included various phases of safe food handling, food storage and dishwashing, as well as basic facts about bacteriology. Discussions after showing of slides and films were given in a majority of classes. On completion of the course, each student was given an attendance certificate. Arrangements for conducting these classes were carried out by the Health Region Sanitary Officers, namely E. J. Thompson in the Kindersley district, R. S. Handford in the Biggar district, and W. H. Campbell in the Rosetown district under the general supervision of the Senior Sanitary Officer, P. J. Swallow. In view of the favorable comments by students, plans are made to have these schools held again next year. The classes will be developed into a four-hour program divided into two two-hour sessions. In such classes a more detailed information about this important field of human activities may be given.

The co-operation of the public with the organizing officials is very much appreciated by the workers of Rosetown Health Region.—The Eagle, Rosetown, Sask.

NATIONAL ACCOUNTS

Canada's gross national product at market prices, seasonally adjusted, eased downward in the fourth quarter last year to a level of $31.0 billion as compared to $31.3 billion in the third quarter. This was the first decline since the mid-down-turn of the 1953-54 period. It amounted to about 1 percent in volume, somewhat more in value, terms. GNP for all 1957 was about $31.1 billion, a rise over 1956 of 3.5 percent value but unchanged in physical volume.

Mr. Thomson said, "posters of this type are excellent educational messages to all concerned with fire prevention practices."

Mr. Hudson who has judged the competition on previous occasions, said this year's entries were among the best he had seen, for originality, message, and artwork. Mr. Switzer said he was extremely pleased with the response to the contest and said it showed clearly that Saskatchewan school children are interested in fire prevention.

"It is extremely important that our children realize the danger of fire, its cause and effect, not only for their present safety, but also for the future of the province. By teaching our children the hazards of fire we are protecting our future and the future of our grandchildren," Mr. Switzer said. Labour Minister Williams said that in view of the entries and effort shown annually for this competition, his department would continue to sponsor the event.

"This is one of the best ways we know of educating children on the hazards of fire and the countless loss in property and lives it consumes annually. We find that children take this knowledge home with the result that parents also become fire conscious," he said. Prizes in the form of cheques will be mailed to the fire chief in the locality of winners. The fire chiefs will be asked to make a public presentation to winners. Supplementary prizes will be given to students in the lower grades who in the opinion of the judges submitted outstanding posters in their age group.

THE CONFLICT OF THE CROSS
How often we use the big "I." If we cancel it out we have a cross. The cross suggests conflict. Paul said, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." (Galatians 2:20).

Sometimes of the conflict that Jesus experienced is suggested in Luke 9:15. "When the time was come that he should receive the bread, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." It is seen further from his prayer in the garden. "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matthew 26:39). When He found the twelve disciples sleeping He reproved them and said, "The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." He felt the weakness of the flesh, too, as He faced the bearing of the sins of man in His own body on the cross. As He went back to pray, there was greater evidence of His winning over the cringing of the flesh as He prayed, "O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done."

The cross often brings conflict with one's friends. Jesus had been healing the sick and casting out demons. He spent the night in prayer and then ordained the twelve. As the multitude pressed in upon Him again, His friends heard of it and went out to lay hold of Him; for they said, "He is beside Himself." (Mark 3:21). When He predicted His sufferings and death, even Peter said, "This shall not be unto thee." (Matthew 16:22).

Recently at a youth rally I saw the film, "The Unfinished Task." A young man, graduated in engineering. Instead of joining his father's firm he decided to prepare for the ministry. His father was disappointed and the more so when his son decided to go to the mission field. After a few years of service the young man died of tropical fever. As the father read his son's diary his eyes were finally opened to see that to win a soul to Jesus Christ was of more importance than to build a skyscraper. He then went out arousing laymen to a greater interest in missions.

It cost something to take the cross. The rich young ruler turned from it. Saul accepted it. At the end of his journey he exclaimed, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." The cross leads to the crown.

JOHN G. DIEFFENBAKER, PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA

During the 27-minute flight from Prince Albert to Saskatoon where the prime minister was scheduled to deliver a television broadcast, the following press statement was delivered:

"At such a time as this, it is difficult to say more than our heartfelt thanks for this expression of the confidence and trust of the people of Canada," it said. "That today's vote imposes upon us a tremendous obligation of humble public service goes without saying. I know this will be the feeling of my colleagues in the cabinet and in Parliament—for the greater your trust the greater the responsibility imposed upon us. First duty. It has always been my belief that the first duty of any party in office is to give the people and country good government. To this end I shall devote what talent I may have, believing always that the true measure of success in political leadership is the success of one's country."

"We shall now devote all our energy as the government to the solutions of the problems which confront us as a people."

"To this end we shall call Parliament into session at the earliest possible time when the election writs can be returned. I sincerely believe that we shall be able now to turn back the tide of unemployment. That is the first task before us. I now renew my pledge of the fullest action within the competence of Parliament to deal with this matter and restore that measure of general prosperity which is surely the heritage of all Canadians."

Heavier run-off reported

Moisture conditions in southwestern Saskatchewan are greatly improved over the past several years due to early run-off. S. F. Shields, superintendent of PFRA in Swift Current said, "Mr. Shields said that the spring run-off, some 10 days earlier than usual this year, has been good on the north side of the Cypress Hills (and small irrigation projects, stock watering dams, PFRA dugouts, and sloughs have been filled by the run-off."

Swift Current Creek is higher than it has been in several years, but the water is under control, with a little or no danger of flooding conditions developing here this year, he said. Water from Battle Creek and Lodge Creek in the southwest might cause some flood troubles by the time they reach Chinook, Mont. Mr. Shields said.

Spring is a treacherous highway time. Watch for ice slicks hidden on the shady sides of hills. Watch always for the unexpected, warn the Canadian Highway Safety Conference.

BE A COURTEOUS DRIVER

WARNING IS ISSUED

Farmers seeking water on their property should be wary of the claims of water diviners, says J. M. Murray, assistant professor of agricultural engineering at the University of Saskatchewan.

He says in a university information bulletin that water "witching" has proven to be unreliable in every case where it has been subjected to realistic tests.

No method of locating ground water, except by drilling, can be recommended, he says.

"Witching" for water is the use of forked twigs or wires which diviners claim dip or pull in areas where ground water occurs.

Mr. Murray said self-styled diviners have a complete misconception of the occurrence of ground water.

"The people who claim to be able to locate ground water almost invariably miss the ground for water as flowing in underground streams," he said.

Water can be found at almost every location where one wishes to drill a hole. Unfortunately most of this water occurs in clay or shale deposits through which it moves so slowly that it is not available to a well.

"Where sand or gravel deposits occur the water can flow quickly into a well to give a suitable supply."

Thus, says Mr. Murray, the search for a well is not so much a search for water as it is a search for sand and gravel deposits.

He says the claims of water diviners and others who supposedly find water by the use of curious instruments and success through appealing to people who do not understand them and as a general rule have no scientific basis.

Housing development talked for Rotarians

Constantly changing requirements for housing and services, the problems of costs, development of new materials and methods were discussed by Bill Klassen of Klassen Construction for members of the Rotary Club of Estevan at their regular noon luncheon meeting.

Factors creating demands for new houses in larger numbers than at any previous time, he felt were the "aging" of families, and particularly children born during the World War II who are "approaching the marriageable age."

"A family's circumstances and housing requirements change over the years as the children grow up, starting with a small home which is expanded as the family grows," explained Mr. Klassen, "and until the stage is reached where the parents finally are able to build an elaborate home with their savings."

Another factor that creates demands for housing he explained is the movement of population. Factors contributing to this, he added, were the reduced needs for manpower in agriculture, the desire of families to seek out the best possible educational facilities such as are provided in the larger urban centers and the expansion of labor markets in those centers.

A city such as Estevan, he said, is anxious to encourage home ownership because a home-owning family becomes a more permanent part of the community and helps to share the costs of operating the city by paying annual taxes.

Dealing with new methods and materials, Mr. Klassen said a home is the largest single investment a family makes, and new methods are designed to make investment easier for them. Slab foundations are becoming more popular as are square houses which are less costly because there is less exterior wall construction required for the floor space provided.

The development of trussed rafters permit more flexible partition arrangements and re-arrangements, he said. The use of plywood and other sheet materials have aided in the development of panel construction and this permits prefabrication of wall sections.

On a recent trip through British Columbia, Mr. Klassen visited lumber mills and learned why lumber costs and prices rise very rapidly from a comparatively modest cost for the original "stumpage."

The only thing that can be done, apparently, he said, is to strive for maximum efficiency, but in ing, greater co-ordination in trades and "having the maximum number of men working on one house at the same time."

With careful planning of work, he said, it is possible to reduce the total expired time for construction of an above-slab house to a minimum of 14 days.

New materials are available to help reduce immediate and extended costs, he said, such as exterior paints that will last up to 20 years, synthetic roof coatings, above-board plumbing, styrofoam insulation materials, electronic ovens that cook steaks in 4½ minutes, hot water heating systems, zone control thermostats, and such conveniences as new type faucets with one control handle which a housewife, with her hands full, can operate with her elbow and adjust water temperature and pressure to the exact requirement.

Mr. Klassen also discussed the advantages of building and custom building and mentioned the place for public housing in a community.

In closing, Mr. Klassen said that after only two years in this community he had come to feel as if he and his associates had made a considerable contribution to the city during this year.—The Mercury, Estevan, Sask.

Emerson Chamber re-organized

Amid a new spirit of enthusiasm and determination, the Emerson Chamber of Commerce was re-organized, at a supper meeting, in the Brown Derby.

Elected president was Mr. Mike Zaccour of the Boyer-Cole Right. Other businessmen are on the board of directors. A directors meeting prepared an ambitious program for the coming year.

To improve park. Main program to be launched by the Chamber will be the construction of picnic facilities in the town park. The committee appointed was instructed to prepare a long-range plan for the park. It is hoped to survey the park and plan for the day when a swimming pool will be one of the park improvements. Intended for immediate consideration is the construction of tables, cooking facilities, a supply of drinking water and a children's playground. A committee is at work preparing to raise funds for this project. A large scale fund raising program for a new swimming pool is also in the planning stage.

Membership Drive. A concentrated membership drive is being arranged for National Chamber of Commerce week, April 13th to the 19th. The new board hopes to enroll every business firm in the community as well as a large number of persons interested in the improvement of the community.

The chamber meeting heard from Mayor Careless that a new drycleaning shop was a definite possibility. The meeting instructed its business promotion committee to offer the full co-operation of the Chamber to the proposal.

Plans are going ahead for a meeting of members of the Chamber and the council with Mr. John Grant, Minister of Industry and Development.—The Journal, Emerson, Man., April 4, 1953.

THE RAILROAD STRIPE is the season's newest entry in wool sports coats. Wherever leisure hours take you, the black and white "mubby" wool sports coat reflects top taste. "Hacking" pockets, antique metal buttons and pronounced shoulders are still in keeping with today's dashing look in sports apparel.

Wool sports coats favorites for Spring

Starting changes are appearing in wool sports coats this spring, says the Men's Apparel Council. But look sharp, or you may miss being startled. The new tricks are mostly in the small details of styling. Active men, who insist on looking trim and alert, will want to own at least one of the new sports coat models in light-in-the-shoulder wool.

What to look for? This April and May, you'll find many wool Shetland sports coats patterned after the original English "hacking" coat. Specifically designed for sportsmen, the original "hacking" coat, made of fine English wool, had many features to make horseback riding a more comfortable sport. The coat had a deep center vent so it would fit over the saddle in back; it was cut away sharply in front to keep a trim appearance when riding over country roads, and it was buttoned high to protect the wearer's chest. The coat also had slanted, flapped pockets with in-or-out flaps that were more accessible.

Sports coats designers have borrowed from the original to make a jacket more in keeping with today's requirements. The "hacking" sport coat for today is a much shorter jacket, but still retains a natural shoulder, tapered waist and slanted, flapped pockets. This season's wool Shetland fabrics reflect a new restraint in muted stripes and checks and add to the Anglo-American appeal of this particular sports coat model. Colors in tweeds have that certain rich quality that only wool Shetland and lamb's wool can provide. Whether you're Sunday-driving the family through the countryside or headed for the links, you'll want to match a "hacking" jacket with fine wool flannel slacks. You can choose between an olive with a blue overstripe, or a black and white sharply-pronounced hound's tooth check, or a muted gray and rust gun plaid.

The "hacking" coat doesn't tell the entire sports coat story for spring '53. Another new treatment given sports coats is the removable sleeve cuff. This is a new concept in styling that should draw compliments. You'll find it, today, in your favorite clothing store. You can have the cuffs removed, but why not be daring, and buy the jacket "as is."

There's the "flapped" chest or "hacker's" pocket, also new. Leather piping on pockets, too.

Other distinctive fashion features on wool sports coats this spring are pointed and angled but-ton-over flap pockets. You'll find some sports coats with two inside breast flap pockets. Of special interest is the wool hosiery sports coat with bi-wing pleats in back for freedom of action.

Ten years ago you'd have thought such details in men's wearing apparel outlandish. But men today are more clothes-conscious than ever, and look for distinctively-styled sports apparel more expressive of their personalities.

EASIER TO IRON

You can make the puffed sleeves on your little girls' dresses much easier to iron. Just put a hook and eye on the elastic that goes into the puffed sleeve. Then the elastic may be removed each time the dress is washed, and the flat sleeve will be much easier to iron. After ironing the elastic may be replaced.

Civil Defence auxiliary fire fighters commence 16 weeks of extensive training

A 16 weeks training course in firefighting opened recently under the sponsorship of the Hanna Civil Defence organization. The course, with an enrollment of 21 men is conducted in the public school made available through the courtesy of the local school board.

H. B. Clarke, Civil Defence coordinator pointed out at the first meeting the reason for the C.D. fire truck being placed at Hanna this winter. "It was placed in Hanna for the purpose of training auxiliary firemen and not just to be housed for Civil Defence headquarters," said Mr. Clarke.

There is evidence that men in towns adjacent to Hanna are interested in taking this course, and C.D. authorities in Edmonton have agreed to leave the firefighting equipment in Hanna for training purposes until the first of July.

Members of the Hanna police department are co-operating in the course, and at the first meeting, Cat. Beddingfield, acquainted members with various types of fire, equipment, extinguishers, and the proper methods of handling them. Don Cassidy has offered to assist in the instruction, having had 10 months firefighting training at Kindersley, Sask.—The Herald, Hanna, Alta.

In two years

Construction of the new provincial school for the deaf at the Highway 25 site on Milton's southern outskirts is slated for completion within the next two years according to the current issue of Ontario Government Services.

The new school, estimated to cost between $3 million and $3.5 million, is a residential school like the one at Belleville, and will be located on 97 acres of land which was formerly the Kingston farm below Hallow Manor.—The Canadian Champion, Milton, Ont.

FRESH WATER

There are several places in the oceans of the world where fresh water may be found. This is caused by springs escaping from subterranean rivers.

Increasing demand calls for a larger subsidiary

Although production of scriptures by the British and Foreign Bible Society has been at work for 154 years, the efforts to provide Scriptures for the world is really in its infancy. In India, for example, the rate of literacy is expected to increase from its present 17 percent to 80 percent, and the population of nearly 400 million is growing by five million a year.

This situation, as applied to other countries as well presents the greatest challenge of all times to the Bible Societies.
